

Internship 30% (Unpaid)

The Bulan Institute is looking for a Master student or a fresh graduate with excellent writing and editing skills in English and French. The intern will work as a Project Assistant for three months and be a part of the team launching a new project on alternative green energy resources to tackle the climate change and energy crises.

Key responsibilities include:

- Assist in the drafting, reviewing and editing of publications in English and French;
- Carry out targeted background research about green energy resources such as solar and wind energy in Europe and Central Asia;
- Assist in the drafting and editing the project proposals and reports;
- Perform other tasks as required.

Requirements:

- Current student of a Master program preferably in international affairs, security studies, human rights, and environmental studies;
- Strong interest in the climate change, green energy, peacebuilding and human rights;
- Excellent writing and editing skills in both English and French and demonstrated ability to review and edit texts for high-quality academic publications;
- Russian is an asset;
- Strong organizational and communication skills.

The internship is unpaid and home-based. Only short-listed candidates will be contacted. The deadline for applications is 15 April 2024.

How to apply? Send your CV and motivation letter to cholpon@bulaninstitute.org and bulaninstitute@gmail.com as soon as possible. The starting date can be negotiated but it is preferable to start as soon as possible.